Dear First,

Lynn Artz, a medical doctor and former county commission candidate, is arrested on trumped up charges.

Financial reports show Wakulla County is headed toward dangerous financial conditions.

You pay the highest property taxes allowed by law, yet get no extra services.

Our county commissioners, Mike Stewart and Maxie Lawhon, in particular treat citizens like you as nothing more than – well, nothing. Witness this firsthand by attending any county commission meeting or watching it on Comcast Channel

And Stewart and Lawhon do what their special interests tell them to do with no regard to what folks like you have to say.

It's like the message they send us is, "Our way or the highway."

That's why I'm running for County Commission. But I need your financial support of $100, $75, or even $50 for our last minute push to get over the edge.

I currently need $3,758 right now to successfully finish this campaign so you'll have a county commissioner and a county government that respects your opinions and listens to what you have to say.

I can win only with your help. Now. We have less than two weeks. That's why I need you to respond today. With early voting already taking place every day that passes is an opportunity lost forever.

Your last minute contribution will be used to communicate my message to voters. My message of:

- * Your government that actively listens and considers your opinions and thoughts on the issues facing you and your neighbors. Not government that bullies and ridicules you in front of your peers, as is the standard practice of Mike Stewart and Maxie Lawhon
- * Your government that makes decisions in the open. This is so you can see how and why decisions are made. And you can be sure decisions are made with your interests in mind - not special interests.
- * Your government that guards your tax dollars. Your government that uses competitive bids and audits. This is to avoid situations like the one we faced in August when a group reported taxpayers like you are being double-billed. Mike Stewart and Maxie Lawhon's response?

FOR COUNTY COMMISSION

They called an emergency meeting and attacked the group that was looking out for your interests.

The message that Stewart and Lawhon sent folks like you with this last fiasco is that they won't be questioned on how they run the county. They are there to make decisions with your tax dollars and you are to like it.

That's why I need your financial contribution today. We can turn this situation around. I can only do it with your help. Won't you send your contribution today?

Yours,

Reggie Coles

PS: Please send your financial contribution today of $100, $75, or even $50 today. I've included a reply form and an envelope for you. We have an opportunity for a county government that wisely spends your tax dollars and respectfully considers your thoughts and opinions on the issues.
